

In Hawaii, Mutual Respect

A Willingness to Sit Down and Talk

Hawaiian Airlines flight attendants enjoy some of the highest rates of pay in the industry as a result of AFA's cooperative working relationship with management, which has contributed immensely to the airline's continuing success.

The key to this success has been the willingness of airline management to sit down with AFA's Hawaiian MEC to work out solutions to meet the needs of both parties.

Working to Benefit Both Parties

Hawaiian Airlines recently was able to make a multimillion-dollar fleet purchase after coming to terms with flight attendants who will benefit as a result of working on these planes. And management worked with flight attendants to keep flying when an earthquake rocked the islands.

The airline and flight attendants also recently agreed to a profit-sharing agreement that will ensure that the employees will get part of the wealth when the company is successful. The agreement includes a provision ensuring that flight attendants participate in the management bonus program, so they also will benefit from the airline's profitable performance.

A Recipe for Delta's Success

Delta AFA will seek the same kind of cooperative relationship at Delta Air Lines, and it will be up to our executives to meet us halfway. Together, we can build the world's greatest airline and agree to an industry-leading contract for flight attendants.
